

THE MADONNA AND THE STARSHIP

In the golden era of sci-fi TV, why were alien crustaceans so darned literal? Beloved 1950's star Uncle Wonder must create the ultimately irreverent television show — or crayfish from outer space will inflict their death-ray on an unsuspecting viewership. It is New York City, 1953. The new medium of live television has been kind to young pulp-fiction writer Kurt Jastrow. Not only does he enjoy scripting a popular children's space opera, Brock Barton and His Rocket...

Reader's Opinions

When I saw this book in the library, I thought it was something I had already read, but it turns out I was confusing it with First Contact-Or, It's Later Than You Think. They have similar premises, and they both have yellow covers, so it's an easy mistake to make. As it turns out, if you liked First Contact-Or, It's Later Than You Think,...
